Iveron Icon of the Mother of God

Feast Day 12 February

The Iveron Icon of the Mother of God holds a special place in Orthodox Christian tradition and is revered for its miraculous history and spiritual significance.

According to legend, the icon was discovered in the 10th century on Mount Athos in Greece by a monk named Gabriel. The icon miraculously appeared floating on the sea, surrounded by a radiant light, and was retrieved by Gabriel, who brought it to the Iveron Monastery, where it remains to this day.

The Iveron Icon continues to be a focal point of Orthodox Christianity, serving as a tangible symbol of the divine presence and a source of solace for the faithful. Its enduring legacy is a testament to the power of faith and the belief in the miraculous intervention of the Mother of God in the lives of Christians.
